

Philosophy 115: Critical Reasoning

Autumn Quarter 2012

Instructor: Jason Benchimol

Email: jason.benchimol@bellevuecollege.edu (NOTE: Please use the Canvas email tool for all electronic correspondence.)

This is an online course. There are no meeting dates or times. The dates of instruction are 18 Sep 2012 to 7 Dec 2012.

Course Overview:

We encounter arguments in all spheres of our daily lives. Arguments, whether made by family members, scientists, politicians, or media figures, are tendered in support of some position or other. This course is designed to introduce you to the various forms of argumentation and the ways to assess the strengths/limitations of those arguments. By the end of the course, you should be able to extract arguments from a variety of sources and offer a philosophical analysis of each.

Goals and Objectives:

- Development of the ability to identify different forms of argument
- Development of the ability to extract and reconstruct arguments from different media
- Development of strategies for critically evaluating arguments
- Practice the development of analytical writing skills
- Development of the philosophical vocabulary necessary to practice effective critical thinking

Required Text:

Richard Feldman, Reason and Argument (2nd ed), Upper Saddle River, NJ: Prentice Hall, 1999. ISBN: 0-13-624602-8

Additional reading materials may be provided on our Canvas site. You'll be responsible for these readings as well. The reading load for the course will be heavy. Not only do we have a text to read, but in order to develop good argument analysis skills, we'll need to turn to additional sources such as newspaper articles and the like. A student who hopes to be successful in this course will need to budget plenty of time to read carefully and closely. This course aims to develop a skill, rather than to transmit to students a body of knowledge. The best, and likely only, way to successfully develop a skill is to spend lots of time practicing with examples and exercises. The workload for this course will, for this reason, be relatively heavy. Bellevue College expects that a student will spend roughly 15 hours per week doing assigned work for a 5-credit course. The amount of work assigned in this course may take up to 15 hours per week (on average) to complete. Moreover, spending 15 hours per week doing assigned work for this course cannot guarantee that a student will succeed in the course. Students who wish to succeed in the course may need to spend additional time doing course-related work. All of this is to provide reasonable notice that the workload for the course is, relatively speaking, heavy, and to ensure that students are aware from day 1 of the course that working hard in this course will not guarantee (although I suspect it will make probable) success in the course.

More information related to assignments, assessments, and grading can be found on the Canvas site under "Files".

Public Safety

The Bellevue College (BC) Public Safety Department's well trained and courteous non-commissioned staff provides personal safety, security, crime prevention, preliminary investigations, and other services to the campus community, 24 hours per day, 7 days per week. Their phone number is 425.564.2400. The Public Safety website is your one-stop resource for campus emergency preparedness information, campus closure announcements and critical information in the event of an emergency. Public Safety is located in K100 and on the web at: <http://bellevuecollege.edu/publicsafety/>

Academic Calendar

The Bellevue College Academic Calendar is separated into two calendars. They provide information about holidays, closures and important enrollment dates such as the finals schedule.

Enrollment Calendar - <http://bellevuecollege.edu/enrollment/calendar/deadlines/>. On this calendar you will find admissions and registration dates and important dates for withdrawing and receiving tuition refunds.

College Calendar - <http://bellevuecollege.edu/enrollment/calendar/holidays/0910.asp>. This calendar gives you the year at a glance and includes college holidays, scheduled closures, quarter end and start dates, and final exam dates.

ONLINE COURSE

It is the sole responsibility of the student to ensure that she has access to a reliable Internet connection for purposes of working through the course. An inability to connect to the Internet cannot count as an excuse for failing to turn in work on time. You are not required to be online at any particular time or on any particular day. However, I will assume that you are checking in with the course at least once every 48 hours. You are responsible for ensuring that you are checking in often enough to catch any important all-course communication I may have sent, or to be apprised of any changes in due dates or assignments.
