MUSIC 212—Second Year Music Theory III

Prerequisite: MUSC 211 or permission of instructor.

MUSIC 212 focuses on the compositional practices of the 20th and 21st centuries through model composition and analysis. The area of musical focus is modern music; popular and commercial genres will not be covered in this course. The compositional techniques of 20th & 21st century music are very different from those of earlier eras in western music; many of the theoretical concepts and techniques you have learned and used in the completion of analysis projects during the 5 preceding quarters of core music theory and musicianship will in some ways seem inadequate. Since one of the defining attributes of 20th-21st is diversity, the compositional styles that we will cover in MUSIC 212 (i.e. serialism, chance music, and minimalism) will at times seem contradictory to one another. This apparent contradiction is due to the vast number of compositional processes created by individuals who hoped to achieve individuality in their musical structures, materials, and instrumentation (acoustic and electronic). Over the quarter we will survey a handful of these trends through:

1. intensive listening of representative works
2. analysis of existing compositions
3. creating original compositions using certain 20th /21st century techniques
4. investigating the innovations in music notation, orchestration, instrumental/vocal techniques
5. improving your ability to hear, sing, and imagine the music created in this era

Although the music of this era will seem very different, the aesthetic goals are no different than that of earlier composers. With every new compositional technique, instrumental combination, harmonic structure, etc. comes the opportunity to take the listener to a new and fresh sound world, as well as offering the composer the possibility to express something that has not been discovered on an aesthetic level.

Student Responsibility:

Instructors may, at their discretion, agree to accept student work that is submitted in various ways, including in person, to the division office, or via e-mail. It is the student's responsibility to verify that all assignments are actually received by the instructor, whether they are submitted in person or electronically.

It is the student's responsibility, not the instructor's, to initiate communication about progress or concerns with the course. Instructors are under no obligation to inform students that work is overdue; to hassle students to complete assignments, or to call students who fail to attend class. Similarly, students need to keep themselves informed about syllabus changes that may have been made in class. We suggest finding a partner the first week of classes and keeping each other up to date if one is absent.

Official MUSIC 212 Instructor's Project/Homework Policy Addition: Late projects and homework assignments will receive a .1 grade deduction for each day it is late. Deduction may be waived if the student e-mails the instructor with a valid excuse prior to the due date.

MUSIC 212 Attendance Policy: Since this course covers several musical subjects (music theory, sight-sing, & dictation), it is in your best interest not to miss class. If you are sick or have a family emergency it is your responsibility to inform me via e-mail before class time begins. Any student that misses an in-class quiz, without prior notification, will not be given a make-up opportunity. If a student is given a make-up opportunity, the make-up quiz/exam must occur within 7 days. Keep in mind that all sight-singing and dictation quizzes will take place during class time.

BCC Attendance policy:

Attendance at all scheduled class meetings is mandatory. This requirement is particularly meant to apply to courses that are designated for classroom delivery, although distance education courses may also have certain attendance requirements. This requirement is intended 1) to prevent instructors from having to adjudicate individual excuses, and 2) to recognize that excuses are ultimately irrelevant both here at BCC and in the workplace.

While specific attendance requirements are up to individual faculty members, the Arts and Humanities Division recognizes that attending class and participating actively are perhaps the most important way in which students can set themselves up for success. Conversely, not attending class almost certainly leads to failure.

Students in performance courses (Drama, Music, etc.) are reminded that attendance builds the professional relationship necessary between partners or in working groups.

In order for students to be eligible for a grade in a course, they must not miss more than ten classes, or 20% of the total class time scheduled, for any reason. When absences go beyond ten, instructors may a) give a grade of "F" for the course, or b) lower the final grade as much as they see fit. This does not imply that you may be absent fewer than ten times or 20% without seeing an effect on your grade; indeed, we wish to emphasize that any absence undermines your progress and will result in your having to work harder to catch up. Ten absences or 20% is merely the figure beyond which you cannot go without risking your eligibility for a course grade. In cases of legitimate hardship, students may also request that instructors grant a “HW” (hardship withdrawal), which is a non-credit grade.

In summary, when you are absent from a class more than ten times or 20% in any given quarter, you may receive a failing grade. Whatever written policy an instructor has in the syllabus will be upheld by the Arts and Humanities Division in any grievance process.
