This course introduces students to the principles and foundations of international relations, including three major theories: Realism, Liberalism, and Marxism. The purpose of this course is to help you to develop the conceptual and theoretical tools necessary to critically understand and to creatively respond to world events. Throughout the term, we apply these theories to examine a variety of topics in international relations, including conflict, globalization, development, human rights, and contemporary international politics.

Course Objectives

The primary course objective is to give students the analytical and theoretical tools to understand past and current international relations. More specifically, this means the course is intended to help students do the following:

1. develop the ability to critically assess the strengths and weaknesses of different international relations perspectives,
2. become more informed and discriminating consumers of political information,
3. develop a basic understanding of, and appreciation for, contemporary international relations, and
4. foster self-reflection about the rights and responsibilities of global citizenship.

Course Policies

You are responsible for your own learning. I will facilitate interactions and provide clear, upfront expectations that provide guidelines for how I will assess your learning. I expect you to do your best to complete assignments in a timely and appropriate fashion, to attend class each day prepared for the day's work, and to actively participate in discussions and activities. If you do not understand something, you are expected to take the initiative to find out the answer—this means that you are responsible for asking questions in class, emailing me, coming to office hours, etc. It is up to you to try to seek clarity of course concepts and content if you do not understand them.

Creating a Vibrant Space for Discussion: Respecting Diversity & Rules of Engagement

According to Bellevue College's Affirmation of Inclusion, "every member of the campus community should feel welcome to participate in the life of the college, free from harassment and discrimination. We value our different backgrounds at Bellevue College, and students, faculty, staff members, and administrators are to treat one another with dignity and respect." In this classroom, there will be no disrespect around issues including, but not limited to the following: gender (including transgender or gender non-conforming students, as protected under Title IX laws), sexual identity (LGBT+), religion, culture, disability, race and immigrant/ refugee/undocumented citizenship status.

Moreover, this course may involve the discussion of controversial political issues. Remember that reasonable people often disagree. Your challenge and responsibility is to maintain civil discourse. We will achieve this by being respectful of each other and by avoiding inflammatory, derogatory, and insulting words, phrases, and labels. Please use your commonsense to avoid any conduct that might distract or offend me or your classmates.

A Note about Ideology

I have no intention of trying to convert you to my belief system. The issues we will be exploring are often contentious; and often, there will be no right or wrong answers. That said, there are good and bad arguments. Good arguments (i.e., those that are logically sound and supported by the available evidence) will be entertained in the classroom on the discussion board; bad arguments, though, are discouraged.

Academic Integrity

Cheating and plagiarism—using the ideas or words of another as one’s own without crediting the source—are violations of the Student Code of Conduct at Bellevue College. Such behavior will result in a grade of 0.0 for the assignment/exam in question. Please note that these are serious offences, which can result in possible probation or suspension from Bellevue College, and the offense may go on your permanent record. If you have questions about academic integrity, please familiarize yourself with BC’s Student Code of Conduct and/or send me a message via email. I am happy to discuss any questions you have around incorporating others’ texts into your own arguments in advance to avoid potential issues.

Disabled Student Services

The Disability Resource Center (DRC) serves students with a wide array of learning challenges and disabilities. If you are a student who has a disability or a learning challenge for which you have documentation or have seen someone for treatment, and if you feel you may need accommodations in order to be successful in college, please contact the DRC staff as soon as possible. The DRC office is located in B132, and the reception desk phone number is 425-564-2498.

COURSE MATERIALS

Required Texts

- 1) Scott, Carter, and Drury’s IR,
- 2) supplemental material—all of which are available on the course website, and
- 3) daily reading of a major daily news source with detailed coverage of world events.

The primary text for this course is Scott, Carter, & Drury’s IR (1st Edition), which is available in the bookstore and online. It is currently priced at ~$65 on Amazon.com, or you can rent an electronic version for ~$18.

Supplemental texts will be made available on our course website. To access the supplemental materials, click on the “Modules” button, and you will find them uploaded in the order in which they have been assigned. Please note that you are responsible for downloading—and reading and/or watching—all supplemental materials as they are assigned. For those of you who do not have a printer at home, you can print in the student computer lab in the N-Building, or you can read the materials online (without printing).

You are also expected to keep up with current events in international relations. This entails daily reading of the world news headlines of a major daily news source; possibilities include

The New York Times (<http://www.nytimes.com>),
The Wall Street Journal (<http://online.wsj.com>),
The Washington Post (<http://www.washingtonpost.com>),
BBC News (<http://www.bbc.co.uk/news>),
Al Jazeera English (<http://english.aljazeera.net>), or a similar major newspaper with detailed world coverage.

Please find a news source that work for you, and make a habit of reading, listening, and/or watching it throughout the quarter. If you have questions about the appropriateness of a particular news source for this class, ask me (sooner than later). Also, if you speak another language, I encourage you to follow the news in that language and bring that perspective to class. We will delve into a couple of these articles to facilitate a larger conversation and to apply course concepts to contemporary phenomenon. Do not be surprised if current events show up in your exams or as a weekly journal prompt.

Reading/Supplemental Material Due Dates

Please note that all assigned materials should be completed before the class session for which they are scheduled, so that you can participate in discussions and other activities. Any material covered by an assigned reading/video may be included in examination questions, regardless of whether it is specifically discussed on the discussion board. If adjustments are made to the reading/viewing schedule, you will be informed via the announcement board on our class website.

The assigned reading/viewing is important to this class. There are approximately 100 pages of reading and 30 minutes of viewing material per week. If you don't keep up with these, you are going to find it hard to succeed. It's not something you can easily catch-up on, and doing well on weekly writing assignments requires engagement with reading/viewing material. The quarter's tentative reading/viewing schedule appears at the end of this syllabus. Please review it carefully, and let me know if you have any questions or concerns so that we can address potential issues before they become problems.

Reading/Viewing Prompts

To help you get the most out of the course materials, you will be provided with a prompt for (almost) every reading and video assigned in this course. These prompts will be made available at least one week before the reading is due, and they will include a handful of reflection questions and a comprehensive list of key concepts.

Each day's prompts can be found under the heading "Reading/Viewing Prompts" in the module for that week. You are expected to engage with these prompts before, during, and after completing the reading and/or viewing assignment. My primary purpose in creating these prompts is to help you focus on what is important in the assigned materials, to help you get ready for our discussions, and to help you prepare for assignments, quizzes, and exams.

I encourage you to print the reading prompts and to write answers to the reflection questions on the prompts themselves. Also use this print-out to define the key concepts that I have listed. These prompts will prove to be a valuable resource on the midterm and final exams.

Late Assignments and Missed Exams

All major due dates are indicated on the calendar on our course website. Because I believe that one of the major lessons that students learn in college is the importance of meeting deadlines, I will not accept late work unless it has been approved by me BEFORE the date it is due or if you can document an emergency (doctor's note, mechanic receipt, etc.). This means you will have to manage your time accordingly to meet the expectations of this course. All assignments turned in late will receive a grade of 0.0. Likewise, missed quizzes and exams will receive a grade of 0.0. Make-up exams will not be administered unless you receive prior permission from me or you can document a catastrophe, such as being medically unable to take the exam.

ASSIGNMENTS

FIRST WEEK ASSIGNMENTS

World Affairs Quiz (5pts) – Due Thursday, April 9th

This quiz will test your knowledge of foreign affairs; this assessment, however, is a credit/no-credit quiz, so it doesn't matter how many questions you get right or wrong—at least not for your grade. The exam itself should only take five or ten minutes. Please do NOT refer to outside sources (the Internet, your textbook, friends, etc.) while taking the quiz. When you finish, the computer will give you a score out of ten points. I would like you to post your scores on the discussion board, along with your reflections on the quiz and your performance. At the end of the week, I will go back in and either (1) manually change your grade to five points if you took the quiz and posted your results and reflections on the discussion board or (2) zero points if you did not take the quiz or failed to post your results and reflections. You need to take the quiz AND post your score and reflections on the discussion board to receive credit for this assessment—make sure you do both steps. To best way to access this assessment is to find it in the Week One “Module.”

World Geography Quiz (5pts) – Due Thursday, April 9th

Like the Foreign Affairs Quiz above, this assessment is a credit/no-credit quiz, so it doesn't matter how many questions you get right or wrong—at least not for your grade. The exam itself should only take about two minutes. Please do NOT refer to outside sources (the Internet, your textbook, friends, etc.) while taking the quiz. When you finish, the computer will give you a score out of five points. I would like you to post your scores on the discussion board along with your reflections on the quiz and your performance. At the end of the week, I will go back in and either (1) manually change your grade to five points if you took the quiz and posted your results and reflections on the discussion board or (2) zero points if you did not take the quiz or failed to post your results and reflections. You need to take the quiz AND post your score and reflections on the discussion board to receive credit for this assessment—make sure you do both steps. To best way to access this assessment is to find it in the Week One “Module.”

Syllabus Quiz (10pts) – Due Thursday, April 9th

For this assignment, you need to read the syllabus and answer ten logistical questions about the class. The quiz will be made available on our course website. To access the quiz just click on the “Quiz” button, and you should see it. The purpose of this quiz is to make sure you (a) read the syllabus completely, (b) are familiar with the course schedule and my expectations, and (c) can navigate your way around our course website. Regardless of your score, you are responsible for knowing all of the information presented in the course syllabus.

WEEKLY ASSIGNMENTS

Weekly Journal Entries (10pts per week) – Due every Sunday by 11:59pm

I would like you to keep a reflective journal this quarter. The purpose of this journal is to stimulate your thinking about the material being covered in class and to serve as a starting point for online discussions. You are responsible for writing one outside-of-class journal entry per week for a total of ten entries. Each journal entry should be single-spaced and ~300 words in length (+/- 50 words). Each week's journal prompts will be posted on our course website by on Monday, and you must complete your journal entry by 11:59 PM on the following Sunday to receive credit. Each journal entry is worth ten points. Please let me know if you have any questions.

Success Tip: Take the journal prompts seriously, and keep up with the assigned entries. This is your opportunity to engage with and reflect on the week's material. Make sure you follow the instructions regarding the number of words.

Weekly Participation: Contributions/Notecards (10pts per week)

This class should be a lot of fun. Many days, we'll kick off with a discussion of international relations in the news. The day will either focus on lecture content, or we will then work through the reading questions (from the reading/viewing prompt).

Each day we meet, there are a set of assigned readings/viewings. You are required to submit a notecard for these readings; if there are multiple readings, you must write on ALL of the readings assigned on a given day. At the beginning of each class period, I will collect your 3x5 notecard. Notecards must be turned in at the start of class—late notecards will not be accepted, and I will not accept notecards submitted at the end of the class period.

The purpose of these cards is to help you keep up with the readings and to help facilitate a more informed discussion for that day's class period. I will collect notecards every day in order to keep track of your attendance. So if you are in class but have not done the reading, please turn in a notecard with your name on it so that I can mark you as present for that day.

I will not grade each notecard, but I will select a subset of notecards to grade at random; the total score will between 0 to 10 points each week. Notecards must include your name, date, title of the reading, a minimum of 5-6 sentences providing the main points/arguments of the reading, and any definitions or key terms discussed in the reading. You can use your notecards to help you prepare for your exams, so it's important to put some time and thought into making them.

Absences: If you're unable to attend class due to illness, emergency, or pirate attack, shoot me an email, and we'll arrange a short email make-up assignment that helps you get caught back up with the readings. I'll offer a maximum of three make-up opportunities to each student. I also reserve the right to bump up the final course grade of students who do actively participate throughout the term.

Success Tip: Make a sincere attempt to show up each day having done the day's assigned readings. If you find yourself falling behind, talk to the instructor about some strategies for success.

Exams

Midterm Exam (100pts) – Due Thursday, May 7th

The exam will consist of a mix of question types, including: true-false, multiple choice, identifications, short answer, and essay. A study-guide will be made available to you a week before the exam.

Success Tip: Keep up with the assigned material, and do not leave your exam preparation until the night before the exam. I will provide you with a review sheet a week before the exam: take advantage of the review sheet and the reading prompts, and let me know if you have questions.

Final Exam (100pts) – Due Friday, June 19th from 11:30a-1:30p

Like the midterm, this exam will consist of a mix of question types, including: true-false, multiple-choice, identifications, short answer, and essay. Also, like the midterm, a study-guide will be made available to you a week before the exam.

Other Assignments

Theory Worksheet (30pts) – Due Sunday, April 26th

The Theory Worksheet is meant to help solidify your understanding of the theoretical foundations that will influence our analysis of future course content. Complete the Word .doc defining components of the three dominant theories in International Relations (Realism, Liberalism, and Marxism) using the PowerPoint and readings provided. This will serve as a valuable midterm and final exam guide. Please let me know if you have questions.

Political Action Letter Writing Assignment (50pts) – Due Sunday, May 24th

You have a lot to say on a variety of topics, but you might feel like who's going to listen to you. You can make your voice heard. This assignment requires you to choose a political issue that you care about, research it, form an opinion, and write a letter on that topic to an elected official. Your letter/email must be mailed, and you must include it in uploading your files to Canvas. Moreover, your topic must be related to international relations. Start by thinking about what IR-related political issues you care about and why you care about them. Choose an issue, and do some research into what—if anything—is being done locally, nationally, or internationally in regards to this issue.

After you've sent your letter, you will write two responses. (1) The first is a reflection essay on the issue that you chose, who you've chosen to contact, what research taught you about the topic, and what you learned by doing the action. This essay should be a two-page, single-spaced (~800 words +/- 50 words) and typed with Times New Roman 11 or 12-pt font with 1-inch margins. It should also include a clear and descriptive title as well as proper spelling, syntax, and grammar. (2) The second response is an abbreviated (summarized) version of this write-up (~75 words) with your classmates so they have a chance to engage with you about your action/topic. These abbreviated write-ups should be posted on the discussion board called "Action Assignment."

Click on the "Assignments" button on the course website to see more detailed directions for this assignment. You must complete both portions of the assignment in order to receive full credit. Please let me know if you have any questions. This assignment is due by 11:59 pm on Sunday, May 24th.

Success Tip: Think about issues that strike a chord with you as the quarter progresses. Dig in a bit and find out information about that topic: its background, what's being done about it legislatively or otherwise, and the pro/cons of the particular position(s) you might align with. Don't wait until the last minute to complete this assignment.

Final Reflection Essay (50pts) – Due Sunday, June 14th

For this assignment, I would like you to summarize what you have learned in this course by arguing whether for which theoretical paradigm—Realism, Liberalism, or Marxist—provides the best lens for thinking about international relations. You'll want to detail all three theoretical perspectives before you provide evidence supporting your own point of view. You'll also want to consider 2 or 3 events/issues presented over the quarter that you believe your preferred theory explains well. The best essays will also detail how opposing theories don't do quite as good of a job explaining that issue or event. Make sure your argument is clear, and be sure to engage (and cite!) specific course content in your response.

This write-up should be two-pages, single-spaced, (~800 words, +/- 100 words) typed with Times New Roman 11 or 12-pt font and 1-inch margins. Provide a clear and descriptive title. You can choose whatever citation method you feel most comfortable with, as long as you are consistent and it is clear where your ideas originated. I will be grading you on the clarity of your thinking and writing, the depth of your reflection, and the extent to which you incorporate the appropriate course content. I would recommend citing five to ten course materials to corroborate your claims in this reflection.

Click on the "Assignments" button on the course website to see more detailed directions for this assignment. Please let me know if you have any questions. This assignment is due by 11:59 pm on Sunday, June 14th.

Success Tip: Essay structure/organization matter. Thus, the best essays will be third (or more) drafts. Feel free to send me your outline in advance, and I'm happy to help you structure your argument. Also, make sure you engage the literature—from the theoretical foundations to the specific issue/event.
